2026 RGME Symposium

 SAVE THE DATE ***

"Teaching for the Future: Transformations and Renewals in the Transmission of Learning"

Wednesday to Tuesday, 2–8 December 2026

Online and Partly Hybrid

with Part-Day Visits

to

Vassar College

(Friday 4 December)

and

Princeton University

(Monday 7 December)

For our 2026 Symposium, we explore perspectives and experiences in learning and teaching (and vice versa), considered across generations, subjects, and methods. At the center are observations about the challenges and opportunities for the transmission of the past in the hands of the present, notably considering that process through written records, and taking into account our responsibilities for the future. We focus on experiences, at various stages across lifespans, and what they teach us.

The scope for subjects ranges across a multitude of periods, genres, methods, processes, purposes, and results. They span manuscripts and beyond, medieval and more, including printed books, documents, prints, arts, crafts, sciences, and a multitude of approaches to the transmission of learning.

Information/Registration: https://manuscriptevidence.org/wpme/2026-rgme-symposium-on-teaching-for-the-future/

Image: Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France. Département des Manuscrits. Latin 10532, page 2, detail. Horæ ad usum Fratrum Prædicatorum / Book of Hours of Frederick of Aragon, King of Sicily. Image Public Domain via gallica.bnf.fr.